Up and coming UK electronica duo Yimino, are launching their own Ominim label in Spring 2008 with the release of the album Autonoe Vora and single Doe. The single features a remix from ambient outfit Plaid (originally 90's act The Black Dog on Warp Records) and creates a tougher more up-tempo rhythmic element than the original's dry-cut beats and dreamy melody.

Originally named Tiny Desk Unit, the duo changed their name to Yimino when they released an untitled single and album titled The Evolution of Bulbuss and The Polymorphic Nightmare, which caught the attention of none other than the musical soothsayer John Peel who played it on his BBC shows.

To support the release, they secured a Sunday residency upstairs at 93 Feet East (in Brick Lane, East London) that was a great success and brought them to the attention of various London promoters leading to gigs at the Electric Showroom, Ruby Lo and other London venues allowing the duo to work on and develop their live show with its mix of visual and audio elements.

In 2004, the group was invited to support Plaid during the Ether Festival at the South Bank's Queen Elizabeth Hall and with only 10 days to prepare, the duo wrote & performed a 35min set that will be available later this year as a download bundle entitled QEH 2004.

It was during a gig in 2005 with DJ Laptop, Eggboy & DogMixer at East London's Public Life that the duo met & teamed up with Keith Elliot to form Ominim Records, after which they started on their third body of work and first release on the new label; the album Autonoe Vora.

Key tracks from the album include the titles Nes (Sidd) & No Gamet with their Chemical Brothers style vocal cut ups, the single Doe (both original & Plaid remix versions), Kelpy with it's cruising beat and ambient gems Teleprophy, Q bit & Moflek.

Meanwhile, as well as playing festivals in Germany and various UK gigs, this highly prolific masters of electronic production who never underestimate the scope of their listeners have been back in the studio producing fresh material from other acts due for release on the Ominim label later this year.

Yimino will be looking to do a series of performances around the time of release and will be available for interviews/appearances throughout this promotions campaign.
